NEW DELHI: After the great success of Indian Accent, New Delhi followed by Indian Accent, New York, the inventive Indian restaurant that has revolutionised Indian Cuisine shall open at 16 Albemarle Street, Mayfair, London in early October. The site was previously occupied by Old World Hospitality's other restaurant Chor Bizarre.

Rohit Khattar, Founder Chairman of Old World Hospitality, the parent company of Indian Accent, said in a statement: "We are so very grateful to the loyal diners of Chor Bizarre for their love and patronage that kept us going for 20 glorious years.

Indian Accent's innovative menu has been designed by Chef Manish Mehrotra. His creativity showcases the unique amalgamation of fresh local produce combined with home style nostalgic cooking using unusual ingredients from across the globe. The result is a menu that excites the adventurous yet satisfies traditional palates.

Londoners are well versed with Indian cuisine, however what sets apart Indian Accent is their emphasis on being innovative and not sticking to traditional. Talking about the menu, Manish said, "We always want to give our customers something new and innovative and different from the rest." When quizzed about whether he is bogged down by competition, he confidently responded, "Indian Accent has a distinct style, and no one else can bring to the plate what we can."

Apart from the delectable food that is served at the restaurant, the décor of this place is always talked about. And, maintaining their trend, the décor of the London restaurant is minimalistic, modern with Indian elements décor. The lobby is dark and intimate which contrasts the light minimalist interiors inside. Combed pearl-lustered plastered walls, reminiscent of Indian Accent's locations in New Delhi and New York have been incorporated and the lower ground floor is ideal for private dining.
